bBr 97.10.46

145 Brattle Street,
Cambridge, Mass. March 3, 1911.

Dear Editor:—

The words "on distant expeditions" were in my original MS. but were dropped out accidentally in the typed copy I sent you. As they are essential to the connection in which they were used I have restored them, cutting out some other neighboring words which can be spared, to make room for them in your page proof.

The substitution of "carried" for "carry" is not unfavorable, may be guessed if it would make the verse better.

Sincerely
W. R.

Is the Mazamas orbit complete? Your Moon has found its girl.

145 Brattle Street,
Cambridge, Mass.

around whom my place can be better filled by a younger and more active man, more closely in touch with thought and ever changing conditions and able to give more time than I can spare to help along the good work. As for the differences of opinion which have arisen which they are quite far from any shade of bitterness, so far as I am concerned, it is obvious that they are hopelessly irreconcilable.

Yours sincerely
William Brewster.